Mr. SAM LEVINE

The LEGEND gratefully acknowledges the work done by Mrs. Helen Hauptmann's Secretarial 63 class. Also our gratitude to Mr. Shostak for his advice on the literary material and to Mr. Eustis for his help with the art work.

As the date of our graduation approaches, most of us are startled to discover that Lafayette has grown to be an integral part of all of us—the students she has enlightened and guided. She has instilled in us ideals and desirable attitudes so necessary to us as the latest additions to the working members of a dynamic society. We have learned to get along with others, to help the community, and to keep abreast of the times; in other words, we have learned how to be good citizens. This training is invaluable, for upon us rests the duty of healing an upset, chaotic world. We are the hope of our modern civilization. To Lafayette, we shall always be grateful. She has prepared us for this important task.

MARCIA JOSEPHY

TO THE CLASS OF JANUARY 1951:

In a few weeks you will receive your diplomas as graduates of Lafayette High School. What lies before you?

I sincerely hope and trust that it will be a life full of the joys and satisfactions of accomplishment. You will get from life just about what you put into it. Therefore, it is essential that you pick a worthwhile goal and put all of your energies into the attainment of that end. In our United States you have full freedom of choice, but never forget that this freedom makes you fully responsible for your every act and for the results that follow.

Our democracy can grow and prosper only to the extent to which you and all other individual citizens lead the way. May each member of the class of January 1951 contribute his share to a finer and better life for all of our nation in the years to come.

Your Principal,
FRED'K WM. OSWALD

Dear Boys and Girls:

The end of our journey together finds us once more at a crossroads where we pause to say goodbye. I hope you can look back to the three years you have spent at Lafayette with memories that are happy ones—of jobs and work well done; of friendships made; of lessons learned; of obstacles met and overcome.

These are times of great stress. We have tried to help you emerge as happy, successful, self-respecting citizens. May the lessons you have learned here help you to meet the challenge you will face as individuals and members of society.

I hope your dream of happiness in a peaceful world comes true.

Your Grade Adviser,
HERMAN BRENNER

Senior Teachers

Mr. Herbert Chaimas is a native Brooklynite who did his undergraduate studies at C.C.N.Y. In his spare time he enjoys hiking, skiing, folk dancing, and photography. Mr. Chaimas wishes to emphasize that other people have rights and feelings as important as your own, that it is not enough to merely know what is right.

*She liked to walk about a bit -
- to us, she did a good job
at rep. etc.*

Herbert Chaimas

Mr. Harold Dycke can't remember when he chose teaching as his profession—or why. He says that it's long ago. His favorite students are those interested in some form of art: painting, photography, and even music. He was born in New York City and attended Evander Childs High School. His education was then continued at Juilliard, C.C.N.Y., and Columbia. To the Senior Class he bequeaths his best wishes for a harmonious existence.

Born in Fulda, Germany, Mr. Herman Jampel came to America after he graduated from high school. Once here, he attended C.C.N.Y. and Columbia. When the time came for him to choose his life's work we were in the midst of a depression, so he turned to a secure profession—teaching. Mr. Jampel advises the Senior Class to learn to be polite and modest above all.

Born in Brooklyn, Mrs. Elsie Johanson attended Manual Training H. S. She then continued her education at Pratt Institute and N.Y.U. Her favorite hobbies are gardening and collecting butterfly pins, which she works at wholeheartedly. The cracking of gum by the students is her pet peeve. To the students of the graduating class she leaves this advice, "Be friendly and thoughtful."

January, 1951

Born and raised in Brooklyn, Miss Florence Marans was a student at Erasmus Hall High School. She then continued her education at Brooklyn College, Oberlin and N.Y.U. Miss Marans' ambition always was to become a teacher. Her advice to the Senior Class—to have fun, but, at the same time, to help maintain world peace.

We can thank the depression for giving us Mr. Barnett Rapaport as a teacher. It was at that time that he chose teaching as his profession. He was born in Brooklyn, and here received his high school diploma. Then to further his education he attended C.C.N.Y. Besides teaching he devotes a good deal of time to running a bungalow colony. His greatest pleasure is spending time with his wife and two children. To the Senior Class he leaves this message, "Be optimistic in the face of adversity. At all times be courageous and persevering, and things will generally be all right."

Although born in Brooklyn, Mrs. Beatrice Waks attended Morris High in the Bronx. She was a student at Hunter College, N.Y.U., and C.C.N.Y. Her favorite pastime is square dancing. Students showing a lack of consideration towards others are her pet peeve. Mrs. Waks' advice to the Senior Class is: "Realize that education doesn't end with a high school diploma. Brooklyn College offers many courses in the adult education division that will prove interesting to our graduates."

Mrs. Sarah Warshaw, formerly from Worcester, Massachusetts, attended one of the oldest high schools in the country. She received her college education at Hunter College. Her hobbies are folk dancing and embroidering. Mrs. Warshaw offers this advice to the Seniors, "Work hard and be happy."

"Slaves of Fate and Desperate Men"

By STANLEY CORNGOLD

They came en masse, arrow-like to the now-slowly widening frontier: the archaeologists and the anthropologists and the long-named men of intellect. All identical in green-grey coats and polished hair—myopic, pre-occupied eyes peering out behind thick-lensed glasses into the biting air of the low marshlands. So marched the blunted hammers and cranial calipers and notebooks to record the endless minutiae of discovery. News of revelation spreads fast. Already the bold and foresighted among them had hazarded to give the unearthed ruins a time-place. Nineteentotwentyhundred, they said. There on the edge of a vast dark ocean lay a key to the inexplicable and phantasmal civilization of the past. There by the sea could be thrown out flashes of light to a world of Cimmerian darkness. A clue. A hope . . .

To start they broke down the walls that held the archives. And they were angry to find what they did:

"The Man Who Came to Dinner" Success;
Coen Pitches No-Hitter for Diamondmen.

First Tri-School Hop Held at Lincoln;
G.O. Social Group Holds Square Dance.

Belopolsky Breaks Scoring Record with 35 Points;
City Council Refuses Request to Halt Juvenile Delinquency.

Intra-Mural Plans Rejected
by Third Term Council;
Lafayette Inaugurates Program for School Athletic Stadium.

Where is the significance of this, they cried. Where are the exertions of the great men that led them all. But they never asked or knew to ask: Was it their destiny to mean something to those who follow them. Was theirs the rigid life of action and consequence—three reasons why and for. They never knew, or thought to know, that: school is transition; school is turmoil; school is change. And turmoil and change are not poetry. Yes, they mean. But no, they are not anything in themselves—neither music nor disorder; not gracious, but never impassive. They throw off the cold luminescence of the death's head; and at the same time the coruscations of a vivid growth. They are the imperceptible ash from which arise strength and beauty and perhaps weakness and decay.

And so they splintered the doors of the second chamber and carefully probed the remnants and they were sad to find what they did:

Fabulous Football Fever Festival Friday;
Teachers' Octet Sings at School Concert.

Alumni Night of Stars Called "Great";
Pocai, Buda in Special Trip to Paris.

M. Kahn, French Envoy, Visits School
During Tenth Anniversary;
Ardizzone Becomes First Student to Gain Pulitzer Scholarship.

English, Gym Teachers Clash
over Sports Theory;
Darienzo Crashes All-City Team as Left Halfback.

Granted, they said. There are no decisive achievements open yet before us. But in what lies the conflict of the tortured race. Where are the fierce denials and treacherous self-abasements of the pained and stumbling evolution. To the cold and juiceless eye these are not apparent. But that criterion is not enough to negate the violence of their existence; these were, again and again, these were. For it is only to understand that to save oneself in darkness is to clear from the mind the illusion of having ever been in the light. Lost is the seething nature that once despairs and looks to the calm and subtler life he knew; and so doing exposes to an unwilling temper only another drifting collision of outlook and ideal. It is he who must suffer the revelation of the protean forces at work within that have transformed him, irrevocably, beyond all help. And once done, he can go nowhere, that is la maladie du temps. But the bold who do not shudder at the grotesque harlequinade they have been told is renascence, who are not crushed under the moral thumb of society; they, who are the silent, are alone the ransomed.

Still further they searched, pounding down what had remained standing and spreading the dust upon their palms. And they were puzzled to learn what they did:

P.T.A. Broadcasts on Voice of America; All Extra-Curricular Work Stopped.

Ginsburg, Valedictorian, Takes Honors; Rubin Awarded N.R.O.T.C. Scholarship.

How to Keep Orderly Cafeteria? Teachers Demand Wage Increase.

Lafayette Plays Host to Third Tri-School Dance; Sheerin, Former Phil Star, New Baseball Coach.

And finished with what they had come to, slowly, regularly, they turned to start the lonely hegira across the dead and barren swamps to the crumbling towers they had left, comforted that they would be as before, shelter and retreat. No longer the smug and dispassionate, some were astonished and frightened of the drama they had played; the wiser with cautious intuition had seen a great truth; the warm and still living among them had understood. And if the feral men who had once stalked among the buildings of dust were to ask: Did we and for what purpose exist; they had only to know that they had caused their children, gloomy men of science, to wonder at their own fallibility, and the rightness of their system; only this to find meaning in their lives. Through the brumal sleep it would suffice.

Old Father Time is creeping near
 And we are getting old.
 That memories won't disappear,
 We'll let our thoughts unfold.

We've gathered a collection rare
 Of tokens of past days,
 Which now we find are fun to share
 'Ere starting life's next phase.

Besides . . . You can't take it with you!

TO:

Dr. Oswald . . . A student body eager to learn, anxious to cooperate, and striving to become good citizens.

Mr. Brenner . . . Our deepest appreciation for his sincere efforts.

Mr. Grady . . . The Four Freedoms:

Freedom from girls wearing slacks,
 Freedom from black suit wisecracks,
 Freedom from assemblies unruly,
 Freedom from even yours truly.

Miss Lowenhaupt . . . Plan cards without conflicts.
Mr. Holstein . . . A penmanship course with special note on how to write "Aluminum."
Mrs. Weiss . . . La Vie En Rose.
Mrs. Cohen . . . Happiness to increase in geometric progressions.
Mr. Zarachoff . . . 100 study periods for history lessons.
The Students of Mr. Zarachoff . . . Our sincere wishes for the success of the Yankees.
Mr. Gordon . . . Our used copies of "Reviewing American History."
Mrs. Mackey . . . Bernhardt's, Barrymores, and a good script.
Mr. Rappaport . . . Holding companies as numerous as his neckties.
Mrs. Roth . . . A television comedian with a fine sense of humor.
Miss Klieger . . . Two rabbits.
The Bio. Lab. . . . An automatic slide washer.
Mrs. Johanson . . . The fourth dimension.
Mr. Bonom . . . A Lafayette monopoly on State Scholarships.
Miss Koechling . . . Joe Adonis to try at the Student Court.
Mr. Arbeit . . . The key to the mimeograph office.
Miss Holihan . . . An Egyptian mummy to re-do.
The Painters . . . Airwick.
The Health Ed. Dept. . . . A new supply of wastepaper baskets to throw passes in.
Lafayette Cheering Squad . . . Gentlemen—the ones who prefer blondes.
Lafayette Orchestra . . . A sound-proof room, so as not to be disturbed by the rest of the school.
Next Term's News Staff . . . A "News."
Our Legend Editor . . . An expired calendar for the deadlines we never met.
Mr. S. Levine . . . This literary masterpiece to be filed among the last wills of other philanthropists.
Mrs. Hauptman . . . An Electric Typewriter.
The Photographer . . . A photogenic senior.
The Freshies . . . All of our senior privileges.
Next Term's Seniors . . . Our best wishes that the teachers get a raise in salary.

We've hereby bequeathed our hoard of wealth. May it be used in the best of health.

The Perfect Strike

As I was wiping my hands, getting ready for the final frame that would set me down in the books of the American Bowling Congress, I noticed a strange glow in my bowling ball. The ball seemed to be growing larger and soon it was the only thing on which my eyes could focus. There were faces whirling about the ball. Then I heard a voice which seemed familiar, but I couldn't place it. As I looked again, the faces in the ball were fading except for one that grew larger and clearer. It was the face of Stanley Corngold, the well-known scientist, lecturing on his latest invention, two-way television. My, he's drawn a large crowd. Even the president, Sid Cohen, has taken time out to listen. In the press box, covering this spectacular event is Marcia Josephy, editor of the "Daily Herald."

Suddenly, the picture becomes blurred and the ball starts to spin. It stops with a blinding light from the flash of John Huie's camera, loaded with "shots" for the sport pages of the "Daily Herald." These pictures, developed by his partner, Mike Wenig, are photos of Dave Reingold and Donald Demske, two former All-American linemen, leading the football Giants to victory. A full description of the game will be written by Martin Geisser, sports editor of the "Daily Herald." He, at the present moment, is interviewing Vince Palmieri, Herman Druckman, and George Deliandes, all of whom have made their mark with the International Soccer Team. Occupying the last paragraph of Martin's column is the brief story of the promising young rookie of the Brooklyn Dodgers, Richard St. Vincent. Marty, still pounding on his typewriter, fades away and the marquee of the Bijou Theater comes into focus.

The lights spell out the names of Phil Seuling, Dotty Haber, and Ronald Sorvino, who are starring in the play, "Women Prefer Redheads," by the famous playwright Ernest Di Giovanni. The orchestra, conducted by Barry Rubin, is starting to play the overture. In his orchestra are the celebrated figures of Al Goodman, Marty Wiederkehr, Murray Weiss and the famed Newman twins, Dorothy and Pheobe. Peeking out from behind stage are Eugene Askin and Donald Boris, waiting for their cue to open the curtain. On the program, I see the names of Louis LoMonaco and Elaine Chionchio, who did an outstanding job painting the scenery.

In the audience I can see the well-known surgeon Joe Mandelbaum, accompanied by his pretty nurse, Florence Richgat. Directly in back of them is Frank Chiacchiero, up to his old tricks. He is escorting, not one, not two, but three lovely models: Barbara Davis, Sandy Goldberg, and Lorraine Kaufman. Little does he know that his wealth is being eyed by Benton Rubin, Angelo D'Amico and Larry Klein, the famous trio now singing on the show emceed by Marvin Diesenhouse. I hear a buzz of voices and see heads turning as Barbara and Lucille Gianet walk in. Everybody is trying to guess which twin has a Toni. Looking around I discover Sandy Shaw and Connie Lamia, who have been voted two of the ten best dressed people in the country. I'm sure that Sandy had his tuxedo made at Stuart Davis' store, located on Fifth Avenue.

The music of the overture fades into the sound of motors coming closer, and the picture of a rising curtain changes to that of a descending plane. The first to leave the TWA constellation, owned by Ronald Wolin (who owns practically everything in New York) is the pretty young stewardess, Madeline Noviello. Joe Spadaro, our ambassador to England, receives a hearty American welcome as he descends from the plane. With him is his personal secretary, Rosemarie Lo Proto. Back from a command performance for the Queen of England is the famed Ken Bromberg, winner of the Silver Skates. He is being helped by the famous bone specialist, Ronald Appel. There go two famous fashion models, Arlene Ragona and Ruth Meehan, looking very smart in their latest creations by the well-known designer Elaine Kaufman. As I gaze at the procession, I see two handsome faces and recognize the newest Hollywood idols, Marty Klier and Joel Nierenberg. The attention of the crowd is drawn overhead where a sky writing plane is announcing the opening of Jerry Hupert's television show. There's Jerry getting off the plane now, and with him is Diane Seger, who is appearing on his show doing some of her famous dance numbers. Also appearing on his show will be the newly crowned Miss Rheingold, Gladys Werbelowitz.

The plane has emptied and the pilot Jordan Friedman is "taking off." He has the plane twenty feet in the air now—but wait, there's somebody coming out of the door. There are shouts of "Open your parachute" and as he lands safely, I see it is the famous comedian Marvin Birnbaum still doing anything for a laugh.

As the plane flies behind a cloud and disappears from view, so do the faces in the ball. Slowly, it regains its normal size and color and I find myself back at the bowling alley and realize that there is much work to be done before these dreams come true.

Ring out the cheers for the spirit of the senior class who will always shout as
Our teams march on.

Ring out the cheers for their athletes who have played for dear old Lafayette.

Play the game—Mr. Ostro's boys—
Play—Davey Reingold—football captain
Think—Louis LoMonaco—the quick witted quarterback
Run—Donald Braverman—the great broken field runner
With all your might.

We're all together upholding the honor and tradition of Lafayette by always staying
In the fight.

On through the years the senior class will remember how Herman Druckman scored 24 points on the all-scholastic team — its captain, Vinnie Palmieri, and George Delianides, who also made all-scholastic. They'll remember the whole soccer team whose motto was . . . to victory.
We'll march along.

Whoever hears about our hustling first baseman, Red Sirignano, third baseman Vinnie Palmieri and outfielder Richie St. Vincent.
Will heed our song that

Stronger we go as

Forward we go

For Lafayette.
